

Alumni Stories – Alec Sixta

Alec Sixta grew up in Orange County and graduated from Mater Dei High School in 2009. From there he studied Philosophy and Religious Studies at Santiago Canyon College (SCC), Cal State Fullerton (CSUF), and Cal State Long Beach (CSULB). He is currently studying to get his doctorate at CSULB in Educational Leadership. He is working on his dissertation which will examine the influence trust has within the high school classroom to remove the racial achievement gap in the United States.

When he is not reading, writing, editing, or sleeping, you can find Mr. Sixta running it up around Orange County. He averages 75 miles a month. Try to beat him!

Mr. Sixta hopes to come back to SCC as a professor in the Education Department once he receives his doctorate.

Favorite memories of SCC are hanging out in the parking lot with friends talking about classes, life, and lunch, and Mr. Pimentel's, Deaver's, and Granitto's Philosophy classes where I was able to explore thoughts I didn't even know I had.
