Alumni Stories – Minh Pham

Minh Pham graduated in 2013, earning an Associate of Science degree in Biological Sciences, Chemistry, and Physics. Mr. Pham transferred to the University of California, Los Angeles to complete his undergraduate studies, majoring in Biochemistry. He is currently pursuing medical and law school.

Throughout his studies at SCC, he was able to get involved in community projects, complete internships with various non-profit, private sector and public sector organizations, and work, in addition to his volunteering and organizing events to provide resources for the community. Mr. Pham advocates for first-generation college students, the underserved and underrepresented communities to achieve their higher education. He plans to continue this mission as he moves forward to his next steps in both graduate and professional school.

Favorite memory of SCC is how dedicated and caring all of the professors were with their students. More importantly, I have continuously fostered my relationship with them after I graduated from SCC. Now, I'm still staying in touch with them, and I'm asking all of my instructors for further guidance on how to navigate my application processes for both medical and law school.
